The Content and Context of Hate Speech

Rethinking Regulation and Responses

Edited by Michael Herz , Peter Molnar

The contributors to this volume consider whether it is possible to establish carefully tailored hate speech policies that are cognizant of the varying traditions, histories and values of different countries. Throughout, there is a strong comparative emphasis, with examples (and authors) drawn from around the world.

Sales Point:

- Seeks to reinvigorate and advance the debate on hate speech by exploring a middle ground that is contextual and historically specific.
